

ALTRISM

This is the behaviour pattern in which the members of a species help each other. Mutual grooming or preening are good examples. One animal preen parts of the body like neck head back etc that the animal cant do. This may also occur in unrelated animals also. A more interesting form of mutual help is called Reciprocal Altruism , where one animal helps another but may not then receive assistance back itself until some time later.