

Cell line

Cells of a single type taken from an animal or human and grown in the laboratory will proliferate indefinitely given appropriate fresh medium and space. Rodents give rise to cell lines relatively easily where as other species do not. No cell lines have been produced from avian tissue and the reestablishment of cell lines from human tissue is difficult.

dmohankumar.wordpress.com